ABSTRACT

Responses derived from 152 of 219 schools and dormitories operated by the Bureau of Indian Affairs (BIA) are presented in this assessment of the Native American Indian Women's Association recommendations considered by the Assistant Area Directors for Education to be immediately implementable. Each report is presented in terms of a code designating: the recommendation; the school(s)/dorm(s) in alphabetical order; the percentages of implementation achieved by the school(s)/dorm(s); and "status numbers", numbers corresponding to one explanatory remark made by the assessment responder for each school or dorm. A summary tabulation sheet is also presented and indicates that of the 152 schools/dorms responding (a 69% response): 20.1% had 100% implementation; 38.7% had no implementation; non-implementation reasons included lack of harmony with present successful programs, boarding school intent vs day school reality, requirement of additional funds, etc.; full implementation was most often achieved for the recommendation that textbooks be provided in each BIA school system; 50% had 100% implementation for recommendations re: nutritional evaluation and parental contact upon the absence of students; the least implemented recommendations were those re: group homes for teenagers, use of social workers in the schools, social service workshops, special schools for special students, and additional Indian counseling staff. IN SUMMARY

Methods:

The present assessment is based upon the reports of management and staff of 152 schools and peripheral dormitories out of the 219 such educational institutions operated by the Bureau of Indian Affairs. Each of these institutions was provided with a list of those NAIWA recommendations considered by the Assistant Area Directors for Education to be immediately implementable. These were numbered according to page and numeral or alphabetical symbol as they occur in the NAIWA report, "A National Action for Special Needs of Indian Children Program" dated December 15, 1973. Also provided was a form to be completed by placing "X's" in appropriate columns to indicate status of implementation. A trial run, using this form and accompanying guidelines, proved it could be completed by a small group of selected staff in less than one hour. A deadline was set for late November 1975 for the completed forms to be returned to the Indian Education Resources Center for use in compilation of a national report. Because of material transfer difficulties, the deadline was extended to February 1976. At this time, 69 percent of the schools and peripheral dormitories have submitted their reports. These reports compose the body of the document. If late arrival information affects budget or program planning, a supplemental report will be issued.

General Observations of Submitted Data:

As may be seen by the enclosed summary tabulation sheet, 20.1 percent of the 152 responding schools and dormitories were considered to have, in general, implemented the NAIWA recommendations 100 percent; 11.4 percent had implemented the recommendations 75 percent; 9.6 percent had implemented them approximately 50 percent; 7.4 percent had implemented them approximately 25 percent; and 38.7 percent indicated they had made no progress at all in implementing these recommendations. Thus, in "ball park" figures, it was found that about half (48.3 percent) of the recommendations are being implemented by the BIA schools and dormitories to some extent. The other half were reported as either not being implemented at all or there was no response to indicate if implementation had or had not taken place.

In many cases, no reason for non-implementation was given. However, in the majority of instances reasons were presented. These were, in general, as follows: (1) The application relates to schools. We are a peripheral dormitory. The recommendation is, therefore, not applicable. (2) The recommendation was obviously intended for a boarding school. We are a day school and the recommendation is, therefore, not applicable. (3) The implementation of this recommendation would not be in harmony with our present successful program(s). (4) The recommendation has not been implemented and no planning has taken place to bring this about. (6) The implementation would require additional funds at this institution. We do not have such funds available. (It is to be noted that such a reason is contrary to the considerations of the Assistant Area Directors for Education. However, it must be conceded that there may be exceptions.) (7) The full implementation of the recommendation would require additional staff which are not available to us. (8) This recommendation does not apply to the age group of students at this educational institution and it is, therefore, not prudent to expect its implementation. (9) (Numbered 10 on the summary tabulation.) No problems of the nature described in the NAIWA recommendation exist at this institution. Therefore, implementation would appear to be a rash choice. (10) (Numbered 11 on the summary tabulation.) The responsibility for decision and planning to implement is not at the school level, but is the prerogative of the Area, Agency, or other level. (11) (12 on the summary tabulation.) Distance from home to school prohibits the feasibility of implementation of this recommendation.

Whereas these reasons for non-implementation were given for most 0 percent results, they were also frequently given as applicable to other low implementation rates. In a few instances, they were used to explain why less than 100 percent implementation has been achieved.

Full implementation was achieved most often (101 schools and dormitories) of the recommendation "that textbooks, to the extent needed, be provided in each BIA operated school system." Even though this relatively high rate of achievement has been scored, we wonder what reasons there may be that all schools and dorms are not provided with the textbooks they need. Two schools reported they have no library and, therefore, had no means of teaching students to make use of the library. One of these schools has 80+ students in grades 1-6. The second school has 40+ students in grades 1-8.

Approximately half of the schools and dorms recorded 100 percent implementation of recommendations G and H (page 89 of the NAIWA report.) These recommendations read as follows:

G: "It is recommended that the food situation at the Indian boarding schools be studied and evaluated so that the student be given a diet that will sustain and aid the proper growth of an adolescent." (72 schools and dormitories implemented 100 percent; 43 schools and dormitories reported no implementation.)

H: "It is recommended that the parent or guardian be notified as soon as a student is reported missing from the school ground or dormitory." (71 schools and dormitories implemented 100 percent; 42 schools and dormitories reported no implementation.)

Close study of the tabulation summary reveals several recommendations with very low implementation rates. Some of these are:

Recommendation 4, page 86, with 17 reporting some implementation and 122 reporting no implementation at all, reads as follows: "Group homes should be established on reservations to serve the teenager. These homes would have Indian staff and could serve emergency placements." Only 26 of these 122 gave the reason that the recommendation was intended for boarding schools and those reporting were day schools. Fourteen others felt that the recommendation's implementation would not be in harmony with present successful programs meeting the same needs.

Recommendation A, page 88, was reported by 108 schools and dormitories not to have been implemented at all. This recommendation is as follows: "That persons who are employed in the field of social work be employed in the school system, especially in the dormitories where a family setting should be emulated to the fullest degree possible, and the social work personnel be employed as liaison person to work with students, law, boarding school personnel and parents."

Only 23 schools and dormitories reported any implementation at all. Only two reported full implementation. Frequent comments are to be noted to the effect that there are no school social workers serving the school.

Similar lack of success in implementation was noted for recommendation K, page 89, which reads: "That workshops be established (on a yearly basis) to acquaint social service workers of the law and how to refer to properly qualified contacts in helping students who are in trouble with the law.

Those recommendations questioned most frequently were those which would establish special schools for students with special problems, and those recommending more Indian staff such as psychologists and counselors.

On the strengths side, many of the meager spaces for remarks were used to express pride in certain programs such as library programs, audio-visual programs, etc. Some expressed interest with the notation, "Great idea!" or "This would be excellent and is greatly needed here!"

It seems appropriate at this point to make one additional general observation, and that is to say:

Notwithstanding an approximate 31 percent delinquency in responses, and considering school personnel's preoccupation with time consuming every day duties and tasks involved in the care and education of large numbers of children and youth, it is with considerable appreciation that most responses were made with thoughtfulness and interest. Eagerness to find better ways of improving educational offerings and methods as well as providing for the special needs of Indian children, were reflected in many of the responses.

The nature of this report has been to deidentify schools and reflect a national effort. In order that higher echelon help may be obtained, Area Offices in particular may wish to submit specific questions to be identified with specific schools or dormitories if they have not retained copies of their institution's responses. The originals will be retained by IERC for such service.

Finally, due to the differences in the two reporting systems, it is not deemed possible to make valid comparisons between the first report of progress in the implementation of the NAIWA recommendations and the present report. It is hoped future reports will follow the format used this time so that comparisons may be made and progress may be measured in a valid and productive way.

"Specialized boarding schools be established in each Area to serve the child who must attent boarding school because of social problems. Such a boarding school would have a small teacher-student ratio and a small number of children in each home living unit. It would provide psychological counseling and psychiatric consultation. It would be geared toward preparing the child to reenter boarding school or return to his home environment."
